Five Finger Furnishings, designer and creator of one-of-a-kind, artisanal seating for interior designers, is introducing its Studio Series line for retail sale at NY NOW (August 21-24 at the Jacob Javits Center in NYC). Five Finger Furnishings has been recognized as “trendsetting” and has recently been featured in Interior Design magazine, Houzz and Curbed, as well as international publications. All products certified as Made in Brooklyn, NY.

“We’ve distilled the latest trends from our work with interior designers, and tailored them for consumers who are looking for the one distinctive piece that will make their room more expressive and personal, “ says Melissa Dougherty, Owner and Creative Director.

Each piece in the Studio Series layers a collage of rich texture and vibrant color combinations on a clean, simple form. “The elemental line of our seating ensures that the each one is striking and sophisticated—with an individual twist!”

Working with its partners, Five Finger Furnishings has created a ‘small batch’ approach to seating production, enabling a one-of-a-kind sensibility at retail price points. Pieces are handcrafted in Brooklyn using traditional tools and techniques, and customized to order.

New products include vanity-sized stools and mini-benches. Each is both fun and sophisticated, coordinating a two woven, geometric textile with a lush textured seat in ice blue, white sand or flame red. The result? A colorful dash of style, at just the right scale for modern living—Seats that are perfectly sized to adorn the end of a hall, set off a window, punctuate the end of a bed, or provide a welcome seat in the entryway.

Highlights of the collection include:

12 Button Benches are 36” long and 12” deep, with a 17” seat.

Vanity-sized stools, available in two styles: with or without a back. Each stool is a beautiful 24” x 12” seat-for-one.

Maki Yamamoto fabric designs are available on the backless vanity-sized stools and 12 Button Bench, adding ribbons of color and a couture ethos. Maki Yamamoto is trained in fashion design and has completed interior projects for Chanel, Dior and Guerlain; as well as Amy Lau, Pierce Allen, and others. More at www.maki-yamamoto.com

About Five Finger Furnishings

Owner and creative director Melissa Dougherty is a master upholsterer, trained in traditional techniques—as well as a serial entrepreneur with a background in painting and sculpture. Five Finger Furnishings merges traditional, artisanal upholstery techniques with a painterly vision and the clean lines and balanced forms of mid-century modern design.
