Top Brass: RE-SPEC the SHOT and RESPECT the OUTDOORS

January, 2017

Denver, CO -- For the long-time reloaders who like to, “roll their own,” Top Brass has been the long-standing supplier for Once Fired Brass. The secret these reloaders know, beyond saving up to 50% on brass casings, is that Top Brass produces all of its products under a strict 100% Quality Control process. Yes, 100%!

With the use of a proprietary, highly advanced Single-Piece-Flow system, Top Brass inspects every casing (at various stages) as it moves through manufacturing. Only casings that meet their strict dimensional requirements continue-on in the production process. Those that fail are removed for rework or scrap.

What are these demanding requirements? As the industry leader in re-spec'd and reconditioned brass, Top Brass strives to manufacture its products within much tighter tolerances than that of most newly produced factory brass – in some instances, as much as 200% improved over standard SAAMI specifications, while still within the chamber tolerances required for varying rifle (and pistol) platforms, styles and models. This ensures that all Top Brass casings are impressively consistent and accurate. THAT is the true secret the long-time reloaders know.

In addition to (and, perhaps because of) its high-automation production facility, Top Brass is able to take its efficiencies outside the factory doors. Top Brass is proud to say that it is a zero-discharge waste facility...that no environmental waste byproduct is put into the environment. All metal scrap is collected and recycled and no waste water is discharged from its facility. Not only does Top Brass reclaim and recycle used brass into high quality casings, it does so with very little ecological impact...a double sustainability effort. Top Brass can truly claim...they, RE-SPEC the SHOT and RESPECT the OUTDOORS.
