Elitelron announces stainless steel suppressors quieter, stronger, and as light as those made of titanium. Booth 20311

Potomac, MT / January 19, 2016 - After significant market research, requests from customers, and extensive internal development and testing, Elitelron has announced a new line of stainless steel sound suppressors that are as light or lighter, measurably stronger, and much quieter than titanium suppressors.

Recent titanium suppressor product introductions into the marketplace by other manufacturers have attempted to provide a solution to the need for lighter suppressors. Elitelron has considered titanium and other space age materials for designing and manufacturing suppressors and will continue to investigate ways to use alternative materials. But to fill the need for what customers want now, Elitelron has opted to build lighter, stronger, and quieter suppressors through their proprietary design using the best possible material, 17-4 stainless steel. The answer to market demand might be best exemplified by the new Elitelron BattleDog stainless steel suppressor for .308 rifles which is 6 inches long, has a sound pressure reduction level of 28db, and weighs only 16 ounces.

Elitelron's Dale and Kathy Poling and staff can show you their lighter sound suppressors at the 2016 SHOT Show held in Las Vegas from January 19th through the 22nd at the Sands Expo and Convention Center. The SHOT Show is the largest firearms industry trade show in the world with representation from over 100 countries. Elitelron cordially invites attendees to examine and find out more about their sound suppressors, their updated REVOLUTION Bipod™, and other products at Booth 20311.

Elitelron's Dale Poling recently remarked during a video interview, "On today's battle field and for special tactical police operations, lighter, stronger, and quieter are not just items on a wish list. They are mission requirements. And the same goes for serious competitive marksmen and hunters. Those elite shooters are the people whose needs we endeavor to meet or exceed."
