

Cox Arms USA to Release Combat BCG

San Tan Valley, AZ. Cox Arms USA, manufacturer of elite-level rifles has announced the SHOT Show release of their proprietary Combat BCG.

Cox Arms USA has built the ultimate BCG; these BCGs' start with, what owner Michael Cox calls, "The balanced carrier". He goes on to say "These carriers are made from 8620 case-hardened steel, with fewer contact points and have slightly more mass than the standard mil-spec issued carriers. The added mass aids in more lockup time allowing for more complete powder burn, less wear and tear on the internal components, and makes them more balanced and centered. This keeps everything running true in the upper receiver's bore, which directly affects the accuracy and smoothness of the whole system."

Bolts on the unit are 9310 case-hardened steel which is shot peened, (MPI) magnetic particle inspected, and (HPT) high pressure tested. They also feature Sprinco extra power cryo-treated extractor springs, Viton O-Rings, cryo-treated ejector springs, and cryo-treated gas rings for superior performance and life span. Although these are tools at the end of the day, Cox Arms USA has spared no expense in creating these works of art.
