FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Luth-AR Brings Rifle Barrel Manufacturing Fully In-House

Buffalo, MN — January 13, 2026 — Luth-AR, a leader in premium firearm components and accessories, has transitioned its entire line of rifle barrel manufacturing to an in-house process, consolidating all major production steps under one roof.

By controlling every stage—from raw material preparation through final machining and finishing—the company has streamlined production flow while reducing dependency on outside suppliers.

This shift allows for tighter quality control, greater manufacturing consistency, and improved precision across the full product line. In-house barrel production also enhances Luth-AR's ability to monitor tolerances in real time, implement process improvements quickly, and maintain uniform standards from one barrel to the next.

The first new product to result from this expanded capability is an 18" .22 LR Bull Barrel designed for 10/22®-style actions. Additional calibers and configurations are currently in development and will be announced in the near future.
