

Kinisium Offers First-Look at New Prototypes Designed to Easily Integrate and Enhance Gun Safety at SHOT Show 2026

LAS VEGAS, Nevada (January 13, 2026) - Being unveiled for the first time at SHOT Show, Kinisium will offer a first look at its newest product line, currently dubbed the Kini Safety Mag. These prototypes are a new safety accessory that merges the best features of Kini's original Safe Alert - a compact, versatile motion sensor that can be placed anywhere or easily attached to any surface to offer real-time, discreet SMS text and email alerts and push notifications within seconds of unauthorized movement - with a "dummy" gun magazine. These new products will be able to be loaded directly into a firearm and trigger an alert when it is moved or removed from the gun, simplifying safety even further. The team will be showcasing multiple Kini Safety Mags for different firearms: AR 15, SIG Sauer P365 and Glock 1719, and many others. Since this will be the product's first, early debut, Kini invites attendees to come check out the Safety Mag at the show (booth 42562) and provide feedback.

The Kini SafeAlert is currently sold on Kinisium's website and select retail partners, including Amazon. The Kini Safety Mag will be produced and available sometime in early 2026. About Kinisium

Kinisium was founded by Mike and Nicky Zabetian, a dynamic husband-and-wife team with a robust track record in entrepreneurship and professional endeavors. Together, they have brought the Kini SafeAlert motion detection device to the market to help parents be aware of the unauthorized movement of sensitive items, including household guns, medicine, and even the family car.
